INNOVATION: Discover Magazine is now in “Pocket Version”

For over the past seven months, we have been undergoing a global transformation unlike any other we have experienced in modern times. There has become an urgency to implement and adapt to this new world. In areas of education, e-learning has become a necessity and been intensely adopted. Information technology has enabled many businesses to more easily transition into e-commerce. There has also been tremendous growth in online journalism.

The Discover magazine team has always been attentive to innovations in the virtual world and has decided to change its format to a pocket version. By being mobile-friendly in a PDF file, the new magazine format will provide readers with a more convenient and practical experience.

The magazine's new version will allow for increased interactions between readers and advertisers by making available links to connect to their websites, blogs and social networks.

By using paper wisely, we can enjoy reading while helping to save our precious trees!

Portugal Confident in the Recovery of Canadian Tourism in 2021

Initiatives to revitalize tourism

By Luis Aparício

Portugal engages in revitalization of tourism through its “Clean and Safe stamp” and provides travel insurance. The goal is to protect travellers during the pandemic and to strengthen its commitments with a focus on Montreal. The Director for Canada at Turismo de Portugal, William Delgado, gave an exclusive interview to Discover magazine.

Immigrants' Lives in Times of Covid-19

By Hewton Tavares

The pandemic has brought about many changes including the way we interact with each other. Connecting virtually has become a necessity and is now essential to communicate effectively. The restrictions imposed have led to barriers in neighbourhoods and work places. The reports and reflections in this article presented by researcher Hewton Tavares show the struggle of Brazilian immigrants as they adapt to the extraordinary changes brought by Covid-19.

Labour Market in Canada

The New Normal and its Impact on Job Seekers

By Laura Sturmer

The job seekers who will succeed in securing employment after COVID, will have to be well prepared and have good knowledge of the Canadian employment market. They need to understand the challenges of the job positions that will become available and that employers will be looking for talented and creative individuals who are capable and focused on building a network they can rely on for referral and advice. Laura Sturmer, Senior Associate Brand Manager of Canadian Tire, offers some tips on how to efficiently plan and execute job searching while the world faces the impacts of the COVID-19.
